

Andrew Mark EDWARDS

Professor, Department of Health and Physical Education

The Education University of Hong Kong

Professor Andrew EDWARDS is a Professor at The Education University of Hong Kong. He previously held senior academic and sport science leadership roles in the UK, Australia, and New Zealand, including Head of Sport and Exercise Science at James Cook University, Australia, and Head of School & Associate Pro Vice-Chancellor for Research at Canterbury Christ Church University, UK. He has worked as a consultant sport scientist with professional football clubs in the UK and published over 100 sport science papers. He is a Fellow of the European College of Sport Science and has also competed at a high level in athletics and rowing, including being a UK finalist at 400 m hurdles, rowing at Henley Royal Regatta, and winning several international 400m Masters titles.