

Figure 10. The figure shows the condition of training with isokinetic concentric knee extension/flexion at 240 deg/s.

The training protocol was executed for a period of eight months. The experimental group added the new protocol to their usual training regime, while the control group kept to their usual training regime. The post-test session was arranged immediately after this period to examine the